

The Canadian Field-Naturalist

SUPPLEMENTARY MATERIAL:

First known observations of migratory Army Cutworm Moth (Euxoa auxiliaris) in the southern Canadian Rocky Mountains

ERIK PETERSON and GARTH MOWAT

FIGURE S1. Screenshot from video (Video S1) of our 1 September 2022 observation of Army Cutworm Moth (Euxoa auxiliaris) aggregating in a talus slope near the headwaters of the Bull River, British Columbia (50.0587°N, 115.2145°W). Photo: Erik Peterson.

FIGURE S2. Army Cutworm Moth (Euxoa auxiliaris) observations from 2022 to 2023 showing their aggregating behaviour near the headwaters of: a. Bull River, British Columbia (50.0587°N, 115.2145°W), on 1 September 2022; b. Crowsnest River, Alberta (49.7042°N, 114.5736°W), on 16 August 2023; and c. Fording River, British Columbia (50.3153°N, 114.8014°W), on 19 August 2023. Photos: Erik Peterson.